Walker wins Glump coloring contest

Because 11-year-old Unionville resident Nicole Walker did just a little bit more than was asked, she has been declared the winner of the Weekender Theatre 48 Productions — Color the Glump contest.

Nicole, instead of just connecting the dots and coloring between the lines, had the bright idea to deck the Glump out in a black sports jacket, with a diagonally striped shirt and a blue tie. She finished him off by giving him pink feet and hands, grey nails, a blue nose and beard, and pink hair.

While the real Glump in the upcoming Theatre 48 production of the play The Valiant Tailor is purple, the colors chosen by the various artists didn't influence the decision of producer John Kozak. He loved Nicole's presentation so much, he decided to give her four tickets to the opening of the play, Dec. 21 at the new Markham Theatre.

"It's like she decked the Glump out for the premiere," said Mr. Kozak, adding that all of the entries were "excellent."

Other winners, who each receive two tickets to premiere performance at 8 p.m., Dec. 21 are: Miriam Davidovits, Markham; Brooke Maddock, Stouffville; Heather MacDonnell, Markham; Terri MacDonnell, Markham; Natasha Cote, Markham; Alyson Doyle, Markham; Matthew Graf, Unionville; Lisa Fleishman, Unionville; Kristina MacDonald, Markham; Robbie McGarrigle, Markham; Tyler Trafford, Markham; Julie Meisner, Markham; Michael Kyle Cornacchia, Markham; Kim Jones, Markham; David Higgins, Unionville; Lisa Cerone, Unionville; Jeff Clucas, Milliken; Matthew Slater, Uxbridge; and Grant Barber, of Markham.

Winners can pick up their tickets at the Economist and Sun offices, 9 Heritage Rd. in Markham during business hours on or after Monday, Dec. 16.
