Heat's off at MDHS

For those not tanning themselves down south, it sure has been a rather chilly Spring Break.

Last Friday students experienced the bite of old man winter as classrooms in the school were extremely cold.

One room that I was in the temperature was 58 degrees F. — not what I'd call warm. Over half the school could be seen in coats and jackets as the day progressed.

This left students with frozen fingers, numb brains and wishing for a heat wave.

During the week universities such as York and Waterloo are offering guided of the campus to prospective students.

Just give them a call to let them know your coming and they will be more than happy to show you around, and answer any questions on concern you may have.

This is a marvelous chance for all students including juniors to get a first hand look at university life. Grade 13 creeps up awfully quickly and it's good advice to start looking into it as early as possible.

MDHS Highlights

Trina Donaldson

If you're feeling the money grabbers tight pinch and would like to increase your money flow. What better way than a summer job. The job board in the guidance office is overflowing with a wide range of summer jobs.

Full and part-time jobs available for students. They range from performing on stage at Wonderland to becoming a camp counsellor in care of children.

This also gives students a chance to meet new people and make new friendships.

There is a new system in the library where by during lunch period once the library is filled to capacity the doors will then be locked. This is to compensate for the overcrowding and the high level of noise that has been occurring in the past.

This is a good idea to solve a major problem. But what happens to the number of students who would like to use the lunch hour time to get homework done. They are left without a place to work, in which case they usually end up playing cards, in the cafeteria or walking the halls.

Rooms 26 and 27 are to the best of my knowledge supposed to be open at this time as a substitute quiet work area. Unfortunately many students do not realize this as nothing has been said or posted about it at the school.

Fine, compensate for the overcrowding, but please give students an alternative so that they can use their time to their advantage.
