

Sylvia stands on guard

Sylvia Fockler is an extremely competent school crossing guard on Ninth Line North, Stouffville. She's a favorite with all the children. So is her cocker spaniel, 'Tessie', and of course son Andrew. Sylvia 'stands guard' over both Tessie and Andrew plus dozens of kiddies who pass her way four times a day. —Jim Thomas

A silver lining

Dear Mr Thomas:
I wasn't personally acquainted with Stephen Howard. I want only to say, what I've heard so many others say, that I really appreciated your moving account of the funeral service related to this young man's death.
Every cloud has a silver lining.
Sincerely,
Irene Sinclair,
R.R. 2, Stouffville

Driver's lucky escape

WHITCHURCH — A single-car accident on the 5th Conc. of Whitchurch-Stouffville, (Warden Avenue), is still under investigation by York Regional Police.
At press time, a report had not been filed.
The northbound vehicle, reported driven by a Keswick man, went out of control and struck a hydro pole. The impact snapped a power line causing a minor grass fire.
Despite the fact a section of wire was hanging across the car, the driver managed to crawl out a side window without injury.
"He's a lucky man," commented brigade Capt. Bill Brown.

Protect themselves

Dear Editor:
To protect himself and his business, a merchant has to do what he has to do. If this means allowing only three young people into his store at a time, so be it. If they don't like it, nothing's stopping them from going somewhere else.

We all know shoplifting totals millions of dollars across North America every year. Preventive measures must be taken.

I sympathize with the young people who are 'hurt' by this policy. However, like with car insurance, this is a risky age group. Storekeepers can't take a chance. Sincerely,
Roy Cerelli,
Stouffer Street,
Stouffville
