Lea moves up

LEA CRESWELL

After her first job delivering flyers, it seemed only natural that the next step for Lea Creswell would be to move up into carrying newspapers.

And the 13-year-old Markham resident, who has carried both the Economist and Sun and the Weekender for about a year, says she doesn't regret starting the route.

"It looked like fun and I thought it would be good experience," she says. "I like the job." Lea has 64 homes on her Weekender route and 34 on her Wednesday run. She says she enjoys the contact with her customers.

"When you are around customers you're meeting new people," she said, adding about 10 people have decided to receive the paper since she started the route.

Lea is a Grade 8 student at E.T. Crowle Public School. At school, she says she enjoys art, science and geography. In her leisure time she likes sports, running and "especially" dancing.

Lea's dancing is good enough that she has been accepted for the arts program at Unionville High School.

Carrying the paper has been "a learning experience for her," says Lea's mother Linda.

Mrs. Creswell says since Lea has carried the paper, she has gained in confidence and has improved in her interaction with people. She also has her own cash for spending.

"She has her own pocket money," she said. "I don't have to give her any."
