No stone unturned as kids make rock-craft

Lots of children showed up at Markham Community Library Thursday to participate in a rock-craft paint-in. Kids brought enough rocks, but there was a shortage of glue and paint because of the unexpected large turn-out.

Amanda Swami, 5, gets her hands full of paint as she puts the final touches to a rock. (Looking on is Michelle Vollett, 8.)

Melanie Vicars, 8, holds up a sample of completed rock-art (store-bought) which children tried to emulate in their own rock-craft. — Sjoerd Witteveen
