Dear Sir: I'm anxious to tell your readers about a course I'm currently taking, sponsored by the government and offered by Seneca College of Applied Arts and Technology.

job interviews. A person acquires more respect for herself and how to better use those skills she already has—skills she ordinarily takes for granted or doesn't recognize.

The course is called "Working Skills For Women".

Teen dances successful

Dear Jim: On Friday night, I attended the second Teen Dance held in the Town's new Recreation Centre. It was an unqualified success.

Close to 150 young people paid three dollars for an evening of dancing to what seemed, to adult ears, to be incredibly loud music. They obviously enjoyed themselves.

There wasn't a single instance of unruly conduct. Any observer would have been impressed with the fine-looking, well-behaved teens this Town has produced.

I feel we owe a debt of thanks to Mayor Sainsbury for backing this initiative and taking a continued interest in its progress, and to Parks and Recreation staff employee Laurie Cavan who supervised the evening. In addition, Donna Fraas and Pam Goulbourne volunteered as chaperones and did a splendid job.

Playmates store for children only

STOUFFVILLE — In recent months, Success Square, Stouffer Street South and Main, has begun living up to its name.

Believing this to be true, Rod and Susanne Mohr are opening a children's wear store there this week. It's called "Playmates".

Mayor Fran Sainsbury and Ken Sandiford, President of the Whitechurch-Stouffville Chamber of Commerce, will participate in an official ribbon-cutting ceremony, Sat., Aug. 2 at 10 a.m.

"We've been thinking about it two or three years," Mr Mohr told The Tribune. They were convinced recently of the need when one of their daughters required an item of apparel but couldn't find it in Stouffville.

Mr and Mrs Mohr and children, Stacey, 6 and Stephanie 3 live on Alderwood Street. They moved to town nine months ago from Oshawa.

"Back-to-school" stock will range from newborn to age 14, both boys and girls, Mr Mohr explained.

The name, Rod explained, was Susanne's idea. She picked it up from a song Stacey learned at Orchard Park School. It was called "Playmates". Susanne liked it and adopted it.

Mission a success

STOUFFVILLE — For a period of almost two weeks, "Team Renaissance", a group of twelve young people from the Pentecostal Churches of Stouffville and Markham, took their team ministry to the streets of Vancouver.

While there, they had an opportunity to visit Expo '86. However, the main purpose of the visit was to reach out to both natives and visitors in various sections of the city.

"Renaissance" was posted in the gastown district, not unlike Harbourfront in Toronto. Sherry Yeates of Goodwood told The Tribune. A section, however, is part of Vancouver's skid-row, and this is where they concentrated much of their efforts.

"For some of our listening audience it was entertainment," Sherry explained, "for others, it was a thought-provoking message." Because of the noise and the busyness of the area, the music had a greater impact than the speaking skits.

For Sherry, the one-on-one approach was best of all; even though sometimes a little scary.

"A few resented it," she said, "but the majority were very friendly."

Some of the people they met, (on several occasions the same people every day), had reached "rock bottom," Sherry said. The group shared sandwiches with them and they seemed very appreciative of this, she explained.

"Really terrific," is the way she described the experience. "Vancouver knew there were Christians in town."

Sherry said she knew of many conversions including two members of a Canadian Indian family.

In a city the size of Vancouver, most people erect a wall of resistance around themselves, explained Sherry. For some, it's three feet thick and for others, it's only three inches thick. Breaking through this wall is the hard part, she said. Often, the person 'inside' is very friendly.

Sherry described the 'mission' as challenging and rewarding. She said taking God's Word to the people was an experience she'd never forget.
