Tomorrow's stars in talent contest

Richard Sealy and Jill Taylor prepare for Sunday night's search for talent contest, sponsored by the Economist and Sun. The two young singers/guitarists are among a line up of fine local talent. Bring out your lawnchair and enjoy the performances at Toogood Pond in Unionville.

It's finally arrived. Your chance to see the stars of the future. The second annual Markham Economist and Sun search for talent contest takes place tomorrow as part of the Concerts at the Pond series.

The fun begins at 7 p.m. at Toogood Pond in Unionville.

Among the performers are: singers Richard Sealy and Jill Taylor, guitarist/singer Jo Ann Perkin, young dance group Suzie, Sandy, Gina, Jackie and Ronald Nugent, jazz dancer Stephanie Inglis, singer/dancer Carlene Lyttle, jazz dancer Nicole Cummings, reader Heather Hess, guitarist/singer Rick Groves, singer/dancer Tiffany and bands Remarque and Delayed Reaction.

The Master of Ceremonies for the evening will be Roy McCullough. Most of the talent contest entrants are long-time area residents.

Included are a brother and sisters team of dancers and a performer as young as eight-years-old. One 11-year-old is a Grade 9 student who will recite a monologue.

Judges of the contest include Weekender Publisher Bruce Annan, Unionville columnist Lorrie Parry.

This show, like all the concerts at the pond is free admission. So pull up your lawnchairs or blankets and enjoy this variety of talent.
