

Wedding bells ring

By MARJORIE WOODLAND
FOURTH LINE — Wedding bells are ringing again — this time for two former residents of the Fourth Line. Mike May will be married in Oakwood Saturday, Sept. 6 while Rick Fintleman will also walk down the aisle. Many good wishes to these young people who'll be living in Oakwood and Uxbridge respectively.

Wildlife is certainly on the increase in this district. Rumors persists of sightings of deer while racoons are becoming a destructive nuisance to farmers. When a fox uses a former groundhog hole for a den, the field is really messed up. However, it's not as mutilated as a recently investigated wolf den.

An early frost a week ago touched some area gardens and reminds us that fall is just around the corner.

Reta and Art Parratt have returned from a trip to Mr. his mother's former home at Russel, Manitoba. They were able to visit with neighbors who were well acquainted with the family at that time. The Parratts felt well rewarded for their effort locating the old homestead property.

The Baptist Women extend a cordial invitation to all to attend their September meeting in the church. The guest speaker will be Nino DeLuca, who will present an up-to-date account of Baptist work in the northeast province of Kenya. He is presently occupied there in a teaching assignment. It's hoped the Baptist men will also take advantage of this opportunity to hear first-hand about the situation in that part of Africa.

She delivers

Stephanie Long is The Tribune's carrier of the week. The 12-year-old Leaskdale girl uses her bike for transportation while delivering about 75 Weekenders in the north Uxbridge Twp. community each Saturday. Stephanie, the daughter of Shirley and Anson Long, Oxtoby Lane, uses some of her carrier earnings to purchase new clothes. The graduate of Scott Central School has entered Grade 7 at Joseph Gould Senior Public School.
