Dogs herding to Pleasure Valley

Jim Clark and his Border Collies Kate, Mirk, Moss and Trix will be part of a sheepdog trial and Scottish festival set for Pleasure Valley park Sept. 20 and 21. Mr. Clark, a resident of Blenheim south of Chatham, is president of the Ontario Border Collie Club. That 100-member group is presenting the trial to help raise funds for the Hospital for Sick Children. If successful, park management plan to make it an annual event. Pleasure Valley is located on Brock Rd. north of Claremont.

The area's Scottish community is invited to put on their kilts for a gala celebration Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 20 and 21.

It's on these dates that Pleasure Valley recreation park will host a combination sheepdog trial and Scottish festival.

Organizers are hoping this inaugural event will attract spectators — not only just Scots — from several surrounding communities including Whitchurch-Stouffville, Markham and Metro Toronto.

A weekend highlight will be the largest sheepdog trial in Eastern Ontario, according to a news release from Pleasure Valley.

Fundraising event

The competition is being presented by the Ontario Border Collie Club to raise funds for the Hospital for Sick Children's capital campaign.

Serving as a 1986-87 qualifying trial for the United States Border Collie Handler's Association, it'll draw some of the best dogs from across North America to compete for prizemoney in open and novice classes. Reigning English national champion Jim Cropper of Lancashire, England, will fly in to serve as judge.

Ontario club president Jim

Clark feels Pleasure Valley is well suited to host a sheepdog trial.

"I think it's good," he said of the Uxbridge Township park. "It'll be a challenging field for the dogs."

Mr. Clark noted that the Border Collie breed herds a third of the world's sheep population.

"That gives you an idea of the impact it has on livestock," he said, adding that the upcoming trials may help to promote the discipline locally.

Scottish entertainment

Pipe bands like Uxbridge Legion and local highland dancers will also entertain crowds as part of the two-day festival. A Scottish food display and sale is planned as well along with other attractions.

"We hope the Scottish community will turn out and have their kilts on if it's not too cold," said park co-owner Gary Convery of Uxbridge.

Park facilities such as a 400-foot water slide, miniature golf course and woodland roller skating trails will also be available to spectators throughout the trials.

Regular admission prices will be in effect during the two-day festival. Admission only is $4 for adults and $3 for children.
