Fido's Friday

Once upon a time there lived a clown named Jumbo and his dog Fido. Jumbo and Fido lived in England. There was a circus coming up on Sunday.

The day had come. The circus was in town.

First there was the human cannonball. Then an acrobat. Finally it was the clown's act. Fido was in a baby carriage. Jumbo was the mother.

Jumbo kept slipping on his big dress. Each time he slipped, Fido barked. Every boy and girl laughed. They were the best!

The manager wanted them back on Friday. But on Friday, Fido had puppies. That day they went to the circus with the puppies.

In Jumbo's act, he played a dog catcher. He let the puppies out and tried to catch all of them with a butterfly net. The puppies made a hole in the net.

All the boys and girls laughed again. Every other act he did, everyone threw flowers.

When the dog retired, all the other puppies had grown up. He had about $100 to live on. He lived out his dog life happily.

Snow in summer

One day Garfield saw an ad in the newspaper. It said you can win $1,000. Garfield was happy. But you must get snow in the summertime, it said.

"Where can I get snow in the summer?" he asked. He turned on the TV. He saw a commercial in the Arctic.

"I know," he said as he ran up the stairs to get his money.

He bought a magic carpet from the magician. Next he got a cooler and an ice-pack. It was winter where he was but it was summer in the Arctic. He got the snow and was over the ocean.

When he got back he read the ad. It said to bring the snow to 12 Jasper Crescent. He flew there on his magic carpet.

He got his money and went to Africa. He loved climbing the palm trees. He got a motel room and stayed in Africa for two weeks. He loved his vacation.

Birdseed

I am a crunchy apple
I live in a tree.

Birds come along and pick at me.

The birds take the seeds
Back to the nest.

Then the birds
Take a rest.

Friendly feelings

The stars are more dim
The sky is more gray
The days seem so empty
When friends go away.

There's more of a longing
Each day and each night
To be with your friend
You'd put up a fight.

The flowers need sunshine
The grass needs some rain
When friends are together
They're happy again!
