Vandals at cenotaph

Dear Sir:
As a member of the Canadian Legion, Markham District Veterans and as a Markham resident, I would like to thank the persons responsible for the desecration of the Markham Cenotaph and for the theft of the symbol of our country — the flag — on Nov. 8, 1986.

In their actions, the persons responsible show that the mentality that produced bookburning, Krystal Nacht and Euthanasia For the Sick, still live on, even in our town.

By vandalising the poppy wreaths paid for directly and indirectly by the residents of Markham, they show how much easier it has always been to destroy rather than build; to insult rather than forgive.

An Austrian politician has said: "The took the Slavs and we said nothing; they took the Gypsies, the Catholics and the Jews and we said nothing; when they came to take us there was no one left to speak."

Again, my thanks to the perpetrators who by their actions, indicate that the forces of intolerance are with us still.

'Yellow monsters' don't belong here

Dear Sir:
School bus drivers are concerned about driving to and from Newmarket every day to pick up and deliver their vehicles.

Too bad.
Do they realize the hundreds of people who commute to and from Toronto every day?

Wouldn't it be nice if each one of us had a job only a few steps from the front door?

If the work pays so little, it'll be up to the company and individual drivers to find a convenient parking location somewhere in the Stouffville community.

Certainly, a residential subdivision is anything but convenient to the folks who daily, (and nightly), must gaze out upon these ugly, yellow monsters.

Restore service, he says

Dear Sir:
There's something seriously wrong when an ambulance service is withdrawn during an early-morning period when it may be needed most.

This, as I understand it, is the situation in Stouffville; the ambulance isn't allowed to leave the station after midnight.

Whatever the problem, it should be solved, and fast before the Town ends up with a tragedy (and a law suit) on its hands.

Students rowdy

Dear Sir:
I attended Commencement Exercises, (Nov. 7), at Markham Dist. High School.

The program, despite the large numbers of students involved, was carried out in a very efficient manner.

One thing irritated me, however: I couldn't understand why a cross-section of young (so-called) academics, insisted on hooting and hollering when certain award-winners were introduced.

This occurred continuously. Markham High prides itself in being a sophisticated learning institution. Next year, I would suggest, a course on etiquette should be included in the curriculum.

Reader unhappy over kids show ending

Dear Sir:
On Sunday, Nov. 9, my three-year-old son and I attended the Kim & Jerry Brodey show at the Markham Theatre.

For the most part we enjoyed the performance. But I was very disappointed by how the show ended. A letter was read out to the young audience about a little girl who lived in South Africa who talked about "no school today because the Police had closed it down," and the shooting of friends, at this point I left with my son.

We had come to this show for family entertainment and not to hear about people being shot by guns and killed.

I hope that the Markham Theatre hears from more parents of young children who came to the show for a afternoon of family entertainment and who were disappointed by the ending, as I was.
