

Aid for handicapped

By SUSAN SAMILA
Have you heard of Functional Skills or Functional Education? It's an approach to education for developmentally handicapped students and adults—an approach that emphasizes the value and effectiveness of teaching these individuals the work and social skills they need to function well in work situations in the community.

The individual's own community environment is the ideal setting for teaching the skills the person will need for his or her future contributing and productive life. Stouffville has shown itself to be outstanding in its acceptance and support of persons who are developmentally handicapped.

York Support Services Network now asks the people of Stouffville for further support in order to help a 17-year-old girl gain the social and work skills she needs as she enters adulthood. We would like for this young woman to begin to gain work experience in her own community. We have the funds to provide a helper for her in the work place for up to eleven hours per week. What is now required is:

(1) An employer or prospective employer interested in providing her opportunity to work. The work place could be a store, a factory, a restaurant, an office, a day-care program or a seniors' home. The young woman, with the helper/support worker supplied by York Support Services Network, could do a variety of work in these settings.

(2) A helper or support worker is required to assist the student in learning the relevant work skills. This person is ideally from Stouffville, and has some work experience in the Stouffville area. The maximum number of hours per week would be eleven. It is likely that six hours would be worked on Saturday and, if possible, 2 1/2 hours, two afternoons (after school) each week. This is flexible, depending on the requirements of the employer and the available hours of the support worker.

Please phone Susan Samila, (731-6527), to discuss qualifications and remuneration.
