Sanctions don't work

Dear Editor:

South Africa! Sanctions! Boycotts!

There's very little else one reads, sees and hears from the media these days.

This type of repetitious reporting is like 'flogging a dead horse'. You try and obtain more mileage from it but the situation doesn't change.

Political bodies such as Parliament, vested interests and other such motivated groups are, in many cases hypocritical.

For example--the Canadian Government, while not imposing strict sanctions, certainly give the impression they're in favor of them. But the Wheat Board, that comes under Government control, still ships a large consignment of grain to South Africa. This figure because, as a rule, 'Business' has little or nothing to do with morals. This kind of backdoor trading has gone on for decades and applies to all countries. If the goods don't enter through the front door, they enter through someone else's house; someone who's still trading with the enemy.

Economic sanctions have never worked. In fact, they usually have an opposite effect.

While Apartheid is certainly immoral and a denial of human rights, if full economic sanctions were imposed on South Africa, the economies of many countries would be seriously disrupted and many more thousands of people would be put out of work.

A prime minister, chancellor or president has, as a first concern, the well-being of his/her own country. Why then should Margaret Thatcher go along with something she doesn't believe to be a solution to the problem of Apartheid and, at the same time, if she did apply sanctions, she would put tens of thousands of United Kingdom workers on the unemployment list.

According to recent figures, the United Kingdom does approximately $17 billion worth of trade with South Africa and West Germany $19 billion. Why has the United Kingdom been made to look like the villain? Why haven't the media and other countries castigated West Germany and the United States for their failure to support sanctions? I can't help but wonder if those countries that favor economic restrictions, would put their own economies in jeopardy in supporting measures that do not have the desired effect.

I don't recall any world body asking for sanctions or restrictive measures against the perpetrators of blacks slaughtering blacks.

Where were the sanctions when Russia invaded Afghanistan?

The United Nations made a lot of noise and the Olympics were boycotted, but the Russians are still in Afghanistan and continually killing tribesmen there.

So one must ask--why all the fuss about South Africa while ignoring the fate of many thousands in other parts of the world?

What, I ask, was more immoral than preventing hundreds of athletes from taking part in the Commonwealth Games? They were used by the sanctimonious politicians in a blackmailing attempt to make Mrs. Thatcher alter her stand on sanctions. These athletes trained for a very long time in order to take part in competition with the best in the world. Just when they reach their height, both physically and mentally, their hopes were dashed. If it hadn't been so pitiful, it would have been laughable.

Sanctions and boycotts won't dismantle Apartheid. Why not take less abrasive measures such as diplomatic pressure, consultations and conferences with those directly affected? If worked with Rhodesia. Why not try it with South Africa?

Sincerely,
Adam Johnstone,
R.R. 1, Stouffville

Pigeon capital

Dear Editor:

Musselman's Lake has its seagulls and Stouffville has its pigeons.

There's no solution to this problem unless the Town plans to 'cage' every seagull and pigeon in Whitchurch-Stouffville.

Personally, I consider it all very interesting. I also think the owl sentinels atop the Municipal Building are kind of cute.

Who knows, Stouffville may become known as the Pigeon Capital of Ontario. It could be known for a lot worse.

Sincerely,
Irene Hunter,
Bernick Crescent,
Stouffville

Appreciated

Dear Editor:

I appreciate the fact the news media is seldom on the receiving end of praise; more often criticism.

I wish to 'make your day' by complimenting your newspaper on its pictorial coverage of the recent Stouffville High School Commencement.

The photos will serve as a permanent reminder of a very special event in the lives of many young people, all of whom are a credit to S.D.S.S. and their community.

Sincerely,
Ruth Morrison,
Millard Street,
Stouffville
