

Sobering statistics released on teens

Only three per cent of elementary school students in Ontario say they smoke marijuana but by the time they reach Grade 10 roughly one in five students regularly lights up a joint.

These are just some of the statistics on alcohol, cigarette and marijuana use found in a 1986 federal health survey of over 30,000 students.

When it comes to alcohol, the study showed that most elementary school students do not drink, but once in high school almost three-quarters of the student population drink.

And of those who use alcohol, almost half typically quaff five or more drinks at one time.

As for tobacco, 10 per cent of Grade 7s and 27 per cent of Grade 10s smoke. More girls than boys reported smoking.

A complementary Health Knowledge Survey taken in 1985 amongst York Region students offered this sobering statistic — only 52 per cent knew that alcohol affected driving performance.

Other statistics revealed that only a meagre 21 per cent recognized the likely connection between smoking and lung cancer, although a majority of students knew that nicotine is addictive.

No nukes

Who wins a nuclear war? Students at Unionville High School were given a chance to voice their opinions while delving into a frank and informal discussion with Youth Nuclear Disarmament Tour members Alison Carpenter (left) and Maxime Faillie at the school recently.
