

Tackling the big time

Magna backs Le Mans challenger

By ROBERT DONNELLY
Markham-based auto parts manufacturer, Magna International Ltd., is betting that many Europeans will become more aware of the Canadian company by the time the checkered flag is lowered at this year's 24 hour Le Mans endurance classic.

Magna, in conjunction with Rothmans of Pall Mall Ltd., Shell Canada Ltd., clothing maker Sun Ice Ltd., and the Porsche Dealers of Canada, is sponsoring the Canadian entry — a red-on-white Porsche 962C.

Although the 962C weighs in at a slight 1,300 pounds (about half that of a Ford Escort), it packs a punch of 800 horsepower that can catapult itself to 100 km/hr in under three seconds; capable of attacking the 13 kilometre Le Mans course at speeds in excess of 350 km/hr (220 mph). Brun Motorsports, the winning team at the 1986 World Sportscar Prototype Championships, will prepare the slippery twin turbo-charged racer.

Ironically, there are no Magna parts in the 962C, which is perhaps symbolic of both where Magna stands today in the European marketplace and where its aspirations lie in the future.

In the meantime, a $50,000 sponsorship contribution means greater exposure for Magna. Magna International, accompanied by its stylized MI logo, will be prominently displayed on the uppermost portion of the windshield and on the rear whale fin stabilizer.

However, the catch is that many spectators at the event may not know what 'Magna' is, says Operations Vice-president Harry Bytzek.

According to Magna's 1986 Annual Report, the company sold $1.2 billion worth of parts and accessories — everything from body panels to chimes and tone alarms — to North American car makers; a content equivalent to about $66 per car. Over the years, Magna has grown from a small toolshop in Richmond Hill in 1957 to the present 85 facilities in Canada and the United States. In the process, Magna has become somewhat of a household name.

But in Europe, says Mr. Bytzek, the company almost has to start from square one.

"It doesn't do that much good talking about all the great things that we have done over here," he says. "What we need to do over there is to, on a small scale, get one operation going and then demonstrate capability."

For the past year now, that capability has been demonstrated at what he refers to as a 'typical' Magna plant ("100 employees, 100,000 square feet") at Gelnhausen — an industrial park about a 30-minute drive outside of Frankfurt, West Germany.

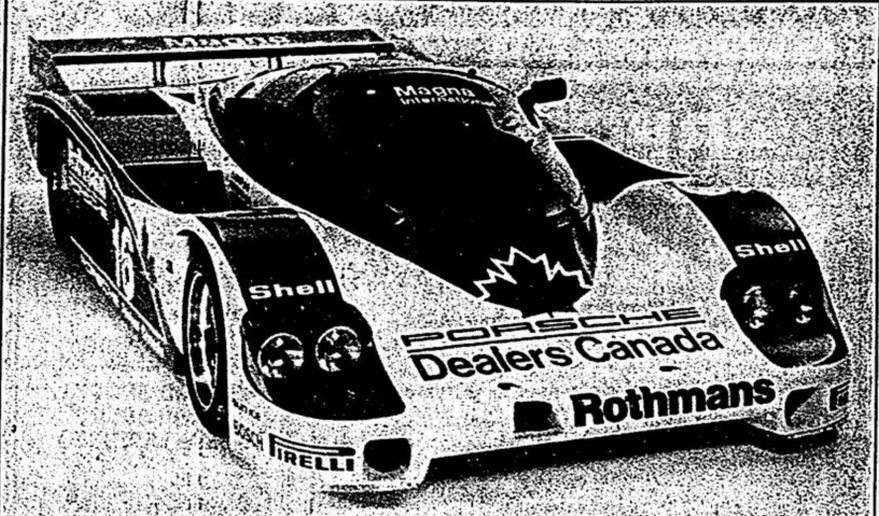

Not only is the factory typical, but also, for a company that saw profits rise 24 per cent in 1986, the West German division has excelled in typical Magna fashion: several major contracts, including those with prestige auto builders such as BMW and Mercedes, have been signed, he says. This has resulted in expansion into a new facility scheduled to open early this spring.

Mr. Bytzek, 45, admits that he is no stranger to the racing circuit, and that his previous involvement in the sport may have had some bearing upon Magna's current role in backing the Le Mans effort.

Magna has also been involved in sponsoring Porsche 944's in the Rothmans Porsche Challenge Series over the past year. The top three drivers in that series — Kees Nierop of Kelowna, B.C., Richard Spendar of Shannonville, and Scott Goodyear of Toronto, earned spots on the roster for Le Mans.

As a race car driver in the early 70's, Mr. Bytzek raced Porsche 911's (which included winning a six-hour endurance race at Mosport in 1973), and a 908 — the predecessor of the 962C — at a 24-hour endurance race at Daytona. In that contest, the 908 developed brake bearing problems that set the team back about four hours, and forcing them to settle for eighth.

Markham-based Magna International — in an effort to make an international name for itself — will be one of the sponsors of this Porsche 962C in the 1987 Le Mans 24-hour endurance race.
