REAL ESTATE TIPS
SHOULD BUYERS TAKE "TIME OUT FOR A CONFERENCE?"
There is nothing more natural in human nature than the desire to "talk things over privately" before making an important purchase. Married couples or relatives and friends would often benefit by discussing a property among themselves without the presence of a Real Estate Agent. The interval gives them a chance to exchange confidential opinions and speak their minds freely. One important benefit of a private discussion while you are inspecting a home is that you are on the scene to recheck a particular point that may not be easily recalled once you have left. Frequently, a feature that could have a decisive effect on a buying decision is missed or not completely understood by one of the buyers. A private discussion could bring it out. If your Real Estate Agent doesn't suggest a confidential talk during a tour of the property and you think one is needed, don't hesitate to suggest it. A sound decision is not reached quickly, but it is reached more quickly with free discussion and your resulting verdict is much more likely to bring lasting satisfaction.
