Review

Teen club off to fair start

By KATHLEEN GRIFFIN

Markham's new teen club opened Friday night with more of a fizzle than a bang, but it's bound to get better.

With what had to be a disappointing turn out of about 50 kids, the party never quite got off the ground. In fact, there seemed to be more teenagers in the parking lot and outside the convenience store, than inside the club.

However, for an opener, it was not a total loss. The lighting system at the club is spectacular and the dance floor is a fair size, with a video screen in the corner. The music was less than great, but when it was good (Madonna, Wham and Duran Duran were popular), the floor was packed.

Although no one was checking purses or pockets at the door, there was no evidence of boozing or drugs, although many teens held the obligatory cigarette.

Located in the Sherwood Plaza on Hwy. 7, there were a few reminders of the previous club, Studio 134. Draft taps and beer advertisements still decorate the bar area, as well as Waitress only!
