Senior's deliveries take tops

By NANCY HOSKIN

The word 'retirement' has no place in Markham resident Ken Reeve's vocabulary.

For the past year he's delivered the Markham Economist & Sun and Weekender and this week was named Carrier of the Month.

Mr. Reeve, 72, is one of only two adult carriers employed by the newspaper.

Active since his retirement, Mr. Reeve and his wife Sheila moved to Markham from Southampton, England in April, 1985, where he worked for a naval shipbuilding firm.

The Reeve's moved to Canada to be closer to their one son who lives in Unionville.

It wasn't long after the couple moved into Dublin Place Apartments that Mr. Reeve saw a notice on the board looking for a carrier and took over the building's paper route.

With the help of a shopping cart, Mr. Reeve delivers 39 Wednesday papers (having boosted his subscription list from 27) 100 Weekenders, which are delivered without charge, and store flyers to the 100 apartments in the building on 10 floors.

"I start at the top and work my way down," Mr. Reeve said recently. "The load gets a lot lighter with each ride in the elevator."

Though delivering the papers can be strenuous work at times, Mr. Reeve says it is good exercise and enjoyable.

"I'm able to talk to my neighbors and occasionally canvass for new customers," Mr. Reeve said. "Being a carrier is a public relations job."

Mr. Reeve noted that the extra spending money he earns from having a paper route comes in handy.

"We're on a fixed pension from England. Our income never increases," Mr. Reeve explained. "It helps to have my extra earnings at hand."

The Economist & Sun distribution department is looking for adult carriers, with many routes currently available. For further information about obtaining a route, call Jenni Hutt or Barry Goodyear at 294-8244.
