Better dental care planned for Srs.

Health Minister Elinor Caplan has requested the Advisory Committee on Dental Care to reconvene and assess the dental care needs of Ontario residents over the age of 65.

"Many elderly Ontario residents are financially unable to receive necessary dental treatment," Mrs. Caplan said. "This study should provide the necessary research to help develop an effective, accessible dental care program for those in need."

The advisory committee will use the following terms of reference:

To review and assess available information on the dental status of Ontario residents 65 and older, and assess the availability, accessibility and adequacy of current programs in meeting these needs. To set goals for the restoration and maintenance of dental health for this age group, and identify priority target groups where assistance is most needed and effective.

To assign essential basic dental care, (preventive and curative) services and present options for possible delivery mechanisms that could be used to provide services to the target groups identified.

The committee recently studied the dental care needs of children in Ontario. Based upon its recommendations, former Health Minister Murray Elston this year announced a dental care plan for elementary school children whose families are unable to pay for urgently-needed treatment.

The Ministry will provide annual funding of $7.3 million to serve an estimated 45,000 children a year. Ontario's 43 health units are administering the program that began in September.
