

WOULD YOU BUY A TURKEY FROM THIS MAN?

There are three reasons why we have placed this ad. The first one is to introduce the fellow who's in the picture. His name is Al. But you can call him "Turkey Al" for short. Al looks after all the turkeys at The Grocer — lots of them, in all shapes and sizes.

The second reason is to explain that not all turkeys are raised to be equal. What may begin as a promising career for a turkey may take a turn for the worse — he may end up being caged and factory-raised, eventually to be offered in frozen or ice-packed form.

Turkey Al has free-range turkeys — they run loose and eat naturally. The difference between these two approaches will be very evident at the table. Al's turkeys will be very moist, very tender and flavourful beyond your greatest expectation, unless of course, you've had the good fortune to dine on one of Turkey Al's old-fashioned birds before.

The third reason is the price: $1.99/lb. New York dressed — also very old fashioned as the best turkeys go.

So visit Turkey Al at The Grocer. He'll put the reputation of his turkeys on the line, toe to toe against any others because he feels, and we agree, that there is none better.

IT'S VERY IMPORTANT TO ORDER EARLY!
