

The first snowflake of winter is the theme this month at the Markham Theatre. Several artists have come up with their impression of the theme that will see various works hanging in the lobby. Here, Pat Stewart (left) from the Markham Group of Artists and Sharon Bright, co-ordinator of art for Markham Theatre, hang a painting for the latest show. — Sjoerd Witteveen

First snowflake theme at theatre

A show with a timely theme is now on display in the lobby of the theatre.

Twenty-eight mostly local artists were asked to submit a piece with their expressions of the "first snowflake of winter." Many novel ideas are portrayed in a variety of media. Oils, watercolors, oil pastel, watercolor and ink and collage are among the techniques employed.

Judy Livingstone, Jan Wilson, Jay Godfrey, Sharon Bright, Pat Stewart, Alga Pugh and John Smith are just a few of those represented.
