

Tragedy relived

Back on Feb. 6, 1973, ten-year-old Cheryl Blundell was struck and killed by a hit-and-run driver on Main Street West, Stouffville. On March 22, the tragedy was re-enacted as part of the York Regional Police Crime Stoppers' program. Tanya McBrien, (right), in the role of Cheryl Blundell, is struck by a westbound 1962-63 model Ford while her companion looks on in horror.

As if seriously injured, Tanya falls to the pavement while the hit-run driver speeds off into the night. Police are hopeful the re-enactment may uncover new clues or prompt the motorist to come forward and give himself up.

Never know they were there

Dear Editor: Several years ago when several residential subdivisions were being proposed for the rural area of Whitchurch-Stouffville, there was a great hue and cry from established home-owners. They voiced opposition for a variety of reasons — noise, traffic congestion, wildlife, etc. One wouldn't even know the homes are there and wildlife, (Canada Geese) continue to flourish.

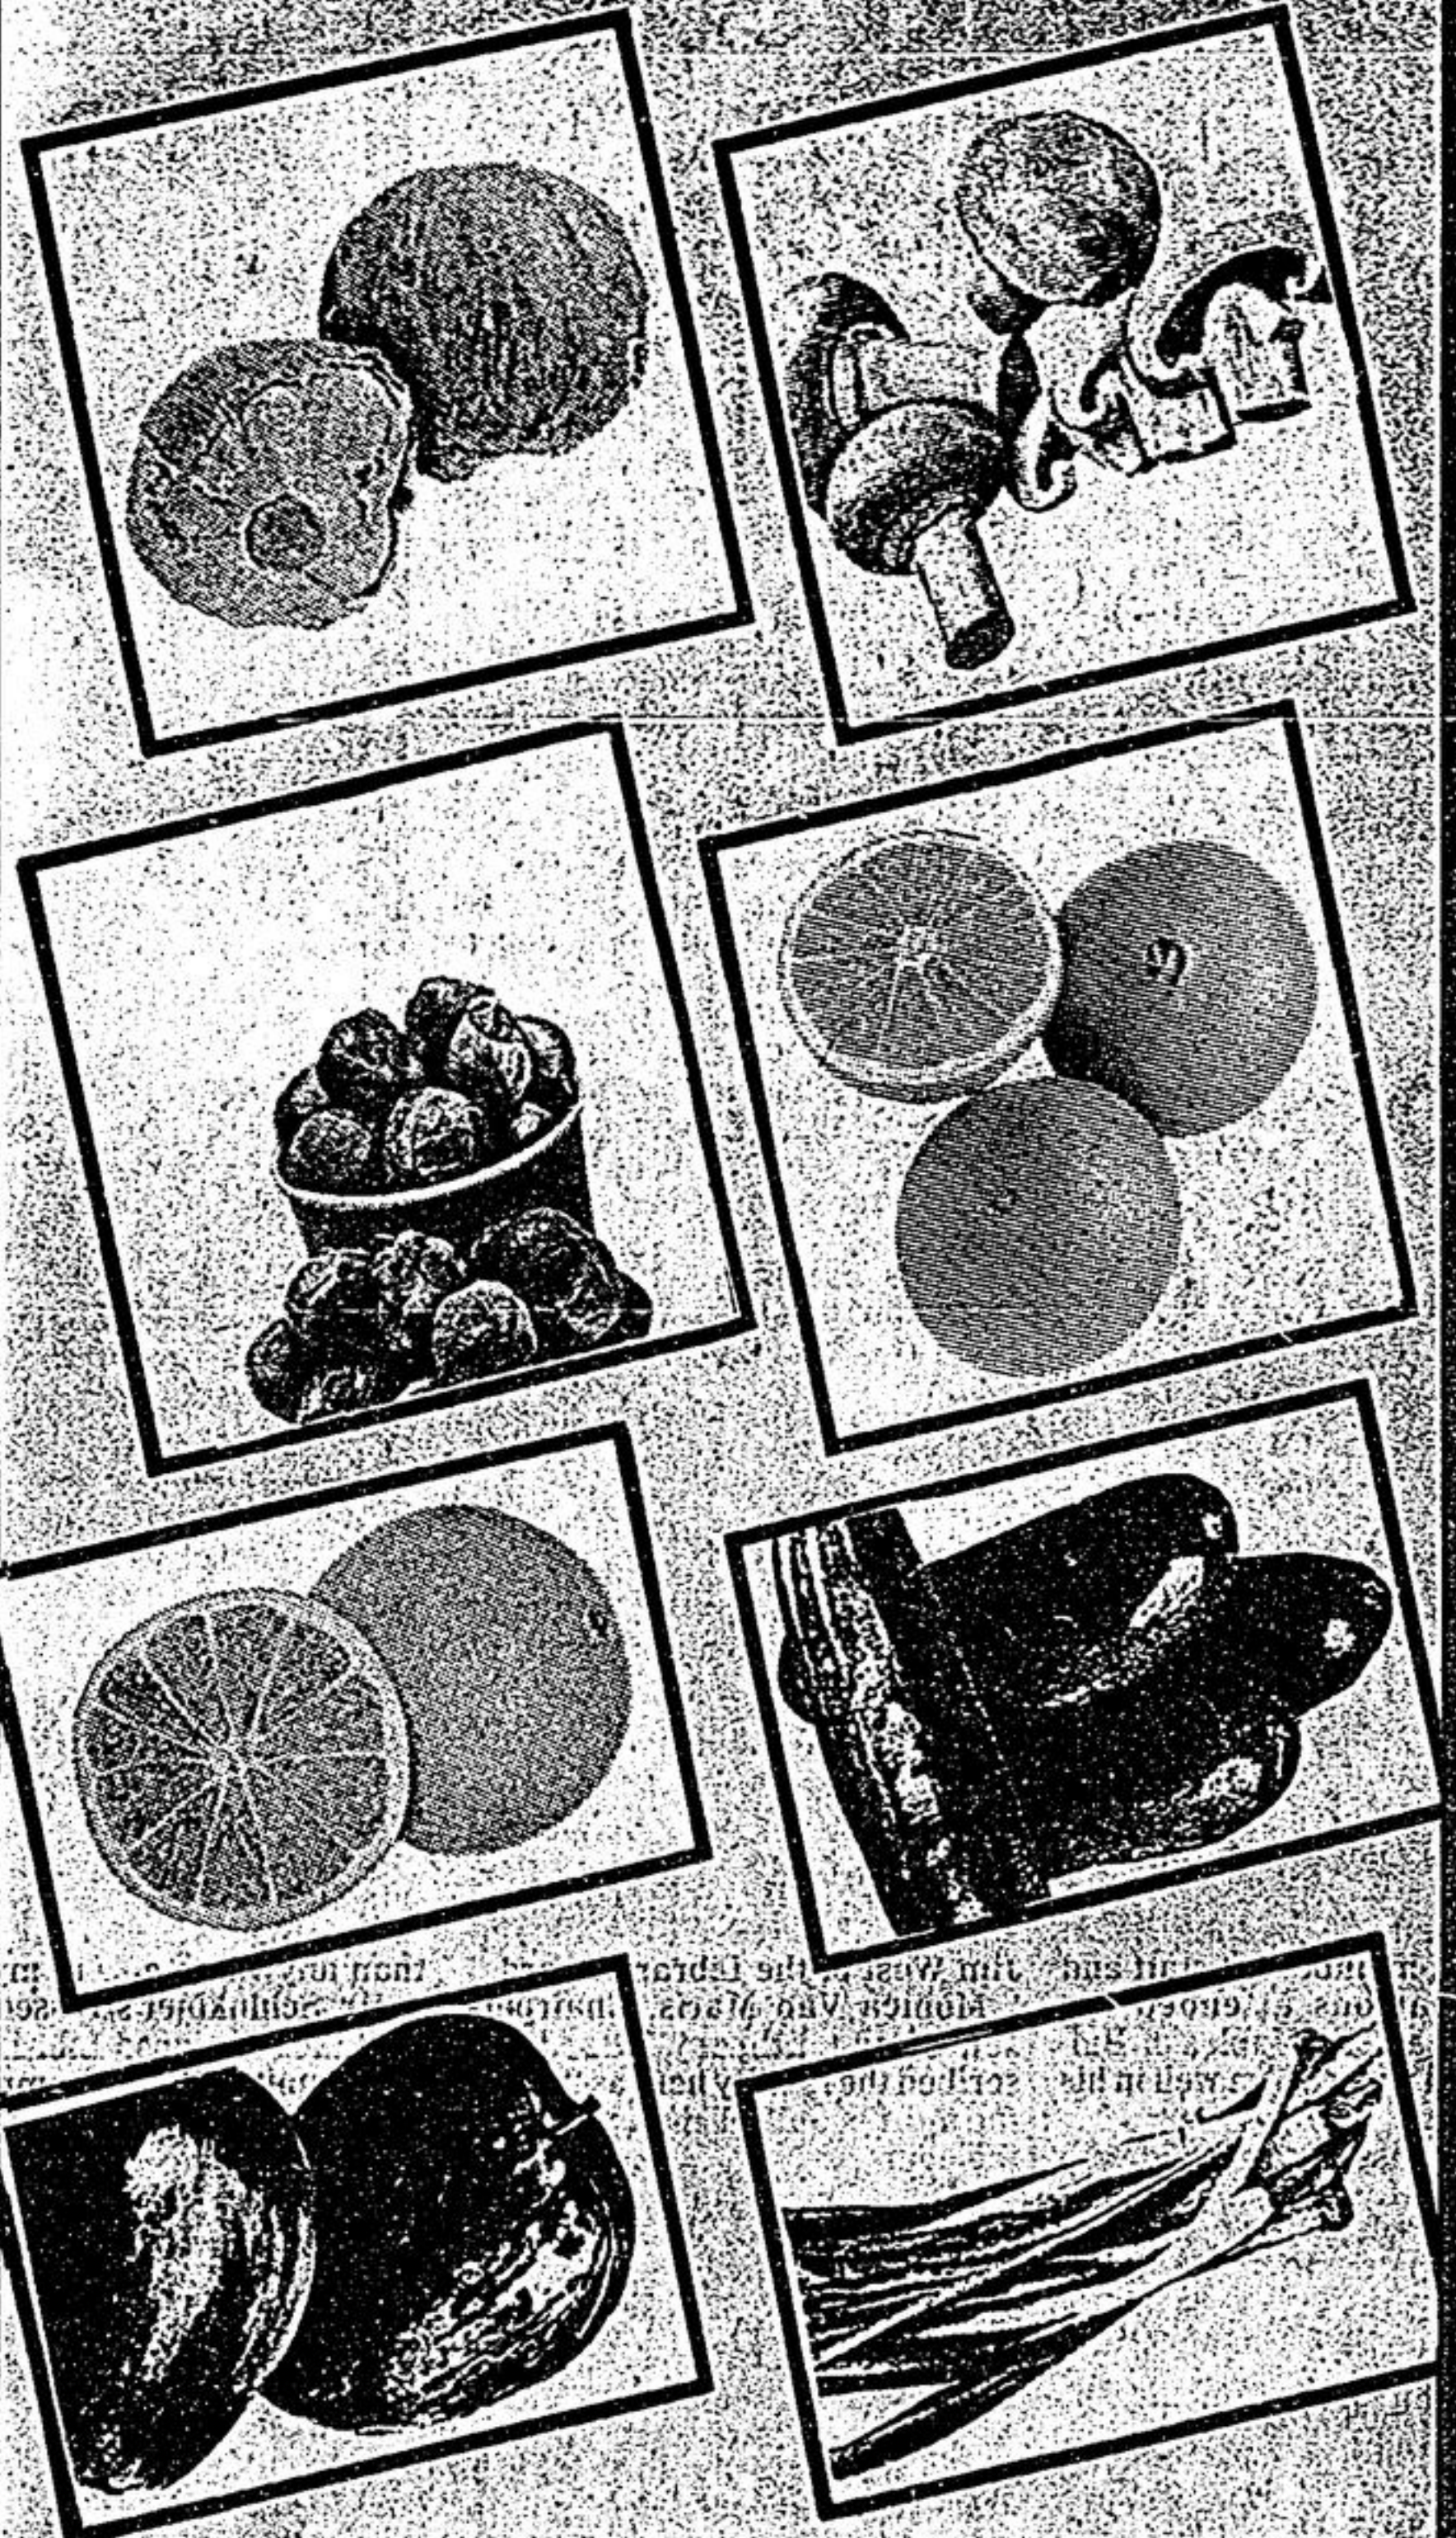

If the Mike Wade Development is an indication of how residential build-up can be incorporated into a country setting, then the natives' have nothing to fear.

Sincerely,
Gordon Kennedy,
R.R. 4, Stouffville
