Kim puts lustre in wood

By JIM THOMAS
Woodworking, a man's world? Kim Seabrook's not convinced.

Neither are her classmates, not any more. The male-dominated course at Slouffville Dist. Secondary School has accepted Kim, one of their own.

She's our 'Girl Next Door.' I decided to give it a try, Kim says. 'It's one of my best subjects.' Kim claims the combination of an interesting course and an excellent teacher has made for a good woodworking year. She was sorry to learn last week Mr. Lewis is leaving.

'We'll all be sad to see him go,' she admits.

Kim, 17, of Elm Road, Slouffville, was born in Toronto, moving to town with her parents, Al and Lynn Seabrook, at age two. She has a younger sister, Wendy, 13.

There are hazards associated with woodworking, Kim explains, but safety first is top priority.

'I've had a few close calls,' she says, 'even looked at my fingers to make sure they were all there.'

She notes, however, that before a student is allowed to touch a machine, he/she has to know all the safety rules.

Kim claims the guys still joke around quite a bit, but

Seventeen-year-old Kim Seabrook, Elm Road, Slouffville, is enrolled in the Grade 11, woodworking class at SDSS and enjoys it. 'If they (the boys) can do it, I can too,' she says. —Jim Thomas she's able to hold her own.

A part-time employee on the staff of Elder Care Manor, Kim hopes to acquire a landscaping job this summer.

'I love the outdoors,' she says.

Following graduation, Kim plans to go on to college in a course related to child care.

This personable Grade 11 student admits her friends are important, also her parents.

'I respect them,' she says of her mother and dad.

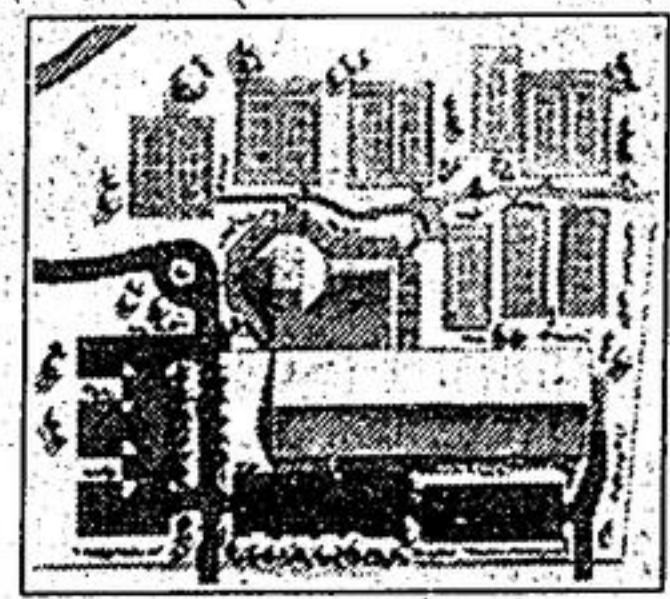

Holidays have included trips to British Columbia and Florida. Some day, she hopes to make it to either Hawaii or Jamaica.
