Four-year-old Patrick Sanders was the youngest plowboy attending the York Region match, Friday, on the farm of Floyd Forsyth, Stouffville. Patrick is the son of Tim and Janice Sanders, Bailieboro and the grandson of Lloyd and Gloria Grove also of Bailieboro. He served as a 'coach' for his uncle Michael Grove. — Jim Thomas

Mall security

Dear Editor

I wish to commend Mr. Benedict of Ironwood Crescent, Stouffville, for bringing the matter of shopping mall security to the forefront of public attention. While protection of children remains a parental responsibility, there's some obligation on the part of malls to offer assistance in times of emergency. To do this, a security program is required so personnel know exactly what to do.

Perhaps some plazas have such a system in place. Obviously some don't for at least it needs to be improved upon.

Today's modern malls are like enclosed towns. Protection of people and property should be in keeping with the population.

To me, a two-person security force is like a two-person police department.

Like in many instances, we all talk about it but no one does anything about it. Mr. Benedict has "experienced" it. Hopefully, some good will come of this experience.

Sincerely,
Ray Gilbert,
Alderwood Crescent,
Stouffville

Welcome return of the mini-skirt

By KATE GILDERDALE STOUFFVILLE — Remember the original mini-skirt? If so, you probably won't be rushing out to purchase one now. For local teens, however, this abbreviated apparel is making a comeback in fact; it's already here.

Thirteen-year-old Wendy Seabook has no doubts. "Yes, I have a mini-skirt. It's a great style. I'll be wearing one to school. I think every girl should have at least one."

Says Natalie Wood, also 13: "They're making a comeback. I'll probably wear one if I'm going out, but for every day, probably not."

Colleen Stewart, 17, says the mini-skirt isn't new. "They've been in style for two years and I expect they'll stay around for awhile. I have both mini-dresses and mini-skirts. I wear them to school and when going out. I think they're great."

"They're fun to wear," claims Jennifer Lamb, 17. Jennifer has both kilt, mini-skirts and bubble mini-skirts, plus other kinds as well.

Theresa Nadine, 15, recalls the mini-skirt as far back as five years ago. "They're one of my favorite styles. I wear them everywhere," she says.

Eva Stefon is more cautious. "They're okay," she says, "but not for myself." She agrees they're a big fashion item at the moment.

At Rhythm 'n' Blues in the Stouffville Mall, mini-skirts and dresses are selling well. "Some just arrived," said Amanda, "they're shorter than average and are very popular. We only have one left."

To some of us, the mini-skirt may be a fashion revival, but to teens, they're new and fun. This means we'll probably see many around. At sixteen, who cares about icy winds and the contortions required for such simple manoeuvres as climbing in and out of a car?
