Environment law for laymen

Many area residents are concerned about preserving the environment, but may not be aware of legal strategies that can be used to protect it.

York University is offering a course called Environment Protection Law, and was designed for those interested in learning legal strategies for dealing with environmental problems. The course begins Nov. 2.

Topics covered include the new

Spills Act, the Environmental Protection Act and how to present a case before the Environmental Assessment Board. The course takes place three consecutive Wednesday evenings from 7 to 10 p.m. The fee is $60. For more information call 736-5025.

Drawing board

An interest in drawing is the only pre-requisite for a course on the subject offered by the Markham Stouffville Family Life Centre.

The course is based on the book Drawing on the Right Side of the Brain, which notes that by using the brain's right side, your perception of the world is more sensitive and accurate. Course leader is Mary MacCarl.

The drawing course begins tomorrow night and runs each

Thursday for 10 weeks from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. For more information call the family life centre at 475-0433.

Classical frequency

While there were plenty of exhibits for adults to look at, the fair's attractions were most popular with the children. At top left, Colton Downs, 3, of Thornhill, couldn't wait to give the conductor his tickets to get the fire engine going. Centre top, baby Victoria McKenzie shows her grand champion award-winning smile as her mom Margret beams proudly at the baby contest. Above, five brave souls agreed to be victims of a BMX bicycle rider. They all came through the stunt uninjured. At left, Markham's Bob Hall catches the interest of a 'fair-goer' as he portrays a scarecrow.

Three-year-old Anthony Rolfe of Unionville (above) couldn't fight the tears when he found out he was too small to ride the Music Express. But he took comfort in the arms of his mom, Anne. Below, these girls aren't sure what's doing the worst damage to their hair: The breeze from the ride or Saturday's blustery winds.

Above left, a member of the skateboard demo team shows how to defy gravity. Above, five-month-old Timothy Loughlin of Stouffville wasn't too excited about the baby contest held Saturday. He placed first in his category, but slept through the competition. Good thing his mom Mary-Lynn was awake to put in a good word for him.
