'Girl Next Door' Skilled equestrienne

By JIM THOMAS

When Angela Wagg obtained her first horse, four years ago, she had no idea it would mark the beginning of a career.

Today, at age 18, she's a student enrolled in Equine Studies at Humber College. A diploma could open many doors including coaching, training and farm management.

"It's the program for me," enthuses Angie. "Humber is the only college in Ontario offering this kind of course." Students attend from all across the country.

She's our 'Girl Next Door'. Formerly of Stouffville, Angie attended Summitview School, then Uxbridge Public and Joseph Gould before entering U.S.S.

She has twin brothers, Brent and Randy, 15.

Angie's parents, Jim and Donna Wagg, are pleased with their daughter's progress. She has dozens of ribbons and awards to show for her equestrienne skills.

Angie and Quarter Horse 'Brandy' were winners of the Area 3 championship. They later placed third in Ontario. She regards the Ontario Breeders Futurity at Waterford as the most memorable. It was her first show and she came ninth.

Caring for horses is a family affair, Angela explains. When one isn't there, the other takes over.

Angela gives credit to trainers Terry Cookson and Sheila Lampard of Kingsville for helping her along the way. She describes Mr. Cookson as one of the top trainers in Ontario.

While horses are now her life, Angie was once a dancer and a figure skater. She retains good memories of both.

She also speaks well of Uxbridge High. She was involved in the school's Grade 12 Co-op Program and did her placement on Bernie Lafontaine's Quarter Horse Farm near Mt. Albert.

Humber College, explains Angie, prepares students for the real world. There are 50 horses on campus.

Angie's in residence at Humber but tries to make it home every weekend.

Eighteen-year-old Angela Wagg, Centre Street, Uxbridge, is a student enrolled in Equine Studies at Humber College. A skilled equestrienne, Angie says graduation will open many doors to a full-time career related to horse training and farm management. —Jim Thomas
