Stouffville league comes of age after first decade

Referee in Chief Wayne Nugent has a staff of six referees working under him, and all are paid for their work.

Wagg reports that the overall calibre of play is good, not great, because of the fact that no one is turned down because of the lack of ability. "The league is competitive," says Wagg. "We keep standings, and the players are all serious, but the competition is not fierce. They are all sportsmen."

Wagg maintains that the league is a melting pot of people from all walks of life who are just guys looking to have some fun on the ice. "We have doctors, lawyers, policemen, even undertakers playing. Everyone gets along very well with one another."

At the end of each season, the league holds an awards night where top teams, and leading individual players, are honoured.
