Barn storming

Windy weather last week took its toll on this barn owned by Stan and Elva Newmarches of Stouffer Street. The barn, built in 1932, was no match for the chilly blasts of wind. Mr. Newmarches was in the midst of putting a fresh coat of paint on the old barn and cleaning up around it when the wind swept into town.

HAVE YOUR SAY

Has Remembrance Day lost its meaning?

Sue Sherban
"I don't think it's lost its meaning. I think they still recognize it in the schools at assemblies, just like they did when we were kids."

Steve Payne
"Yes, I think it has lost its meaning. People glorify war now, especially in the business I am in, theatre, film, and television. There's almost two generations now that haven't known war, and I suppose that's something to be proud of."

Nancy Constable
"It probably has lost the meaning it had for our parents. Our children are two generations removed from it. And it doesn't even mean the same thing to us as it did for our parents."

Reg MacKay
"It pretty well has lost its meaning except for veterans and their wives and families. I don't think it means anything to the young people."
