

Ward 6 newcomer optimistic

By BRUCE STAPLEY
Donald Bigioni says if you are going to get your feet wet in Whitchurch-Stouffville politics, you should take the full plunge.

The Dorman Drive resident is challenging 10-year Ward 6 incumbent Jim Sanders. And he is positive about his chances of achieving an upset.

"I work in the construction industry as an industrial-commercial co-ordinator for the Miller Group of companies. I believe my experience there has enabled me to develop extensive expertise in the building and monitoring of municipal services, roads and subdivisions," he says.

Bigioni, who moved to Stouffville with his wife, Loula and their two children in 1985, sees a seat on Council as a way to help him work for the good of the town he has come to love.

His three priority areas involve recreation, growth and traffic flow in the former village of Stouffville.

The proposed swimming pool, he suggests, may be more than the Town can afford, with its $4 million price tag.

"The need exists, so instead of the grand structure that has been suggested, with full health centre, maybe we can come up with a cheaper alternative, such as the renovation or bubbling in of the existing pool, or maybe we can work with the school board to put a pool at the high school," he says.

He says such alternatives would keep the concept from being shelved entirely until adequate funding is lined up. He would also like to see a running track at the high school for use by the entire town.

"If we can't afford it, we must find an alternative means of building it, such as volunteers from the town building and funding it. I could help with the planning because of my involvement with Miller."

Growth, he states, is inevitable. He feels it is vital for the community to upgrade current services and facilities in an effort to meet today's needs while looking to the future for direction.

"We have to get both short and long-term planning under way, and take steps to upgrade now, so when development comes we're not playing catch-up," he says.

In the area of traffic, he is also confident his career experience will enable him to work towards the solution of the problems facing Stouffville.

He would like to see the relocation of the existing stop light from its IGA-front spot to Market St., making it easier for people turning into the parking lot behind the Bank of Commerce.

He would also like to reduce Main St. traffic on weekends. "I wonder if we couldn't look into putting up a sign saying 'Alternative Route' pointing to the Bethesda sideroad for Sales Barn traffic."

He realizes this would possibly mean that the Bethesda would have to be upgraded but feels the benefits would warrant such capital outlay.

Bigioni realizes there are real problems facing the town, but thinks his problem-solving experience in the business world will give him an edge.

"No matter what the issue, there's an answer. I deal with these kinds of things every day. You can't just slough it all off and avoid it."
