No snow eases Town's workload

By KATE GILDERDALE
Just because there's been a lack of white stuff, this winter doesn't mean Whitechurch-Stouffville Roads Department staff are putting their feet up, says works superintendent Ron Gibson.

Although some money is saved during a winter like this, it doesn't amount to very much.

"The sanding operation is still required and we've had several ice storms," he points out. As a result, more sanding has been necessary. "The lack of snow doesn't make a lot of difference because we don't cut down on maintenance (of machinery)."

When snow is scarce, staff help out in other departments, he says, with things like sewage, water and sanitation.

The arrival of snow is always welcomed by employees because "they like the overtime," explains Mr. Gibson.

Snow removal takes a lot of time and usually results in longer hours, he notes. "There's been some overtime this winter, but it's been very minimal." During the recent ice storm, sanding had to be done twice in one day, because rain was falling over the first layer of ice and then freezing again.

The Town Roads Department is responsible for a total of 136 kilometres.

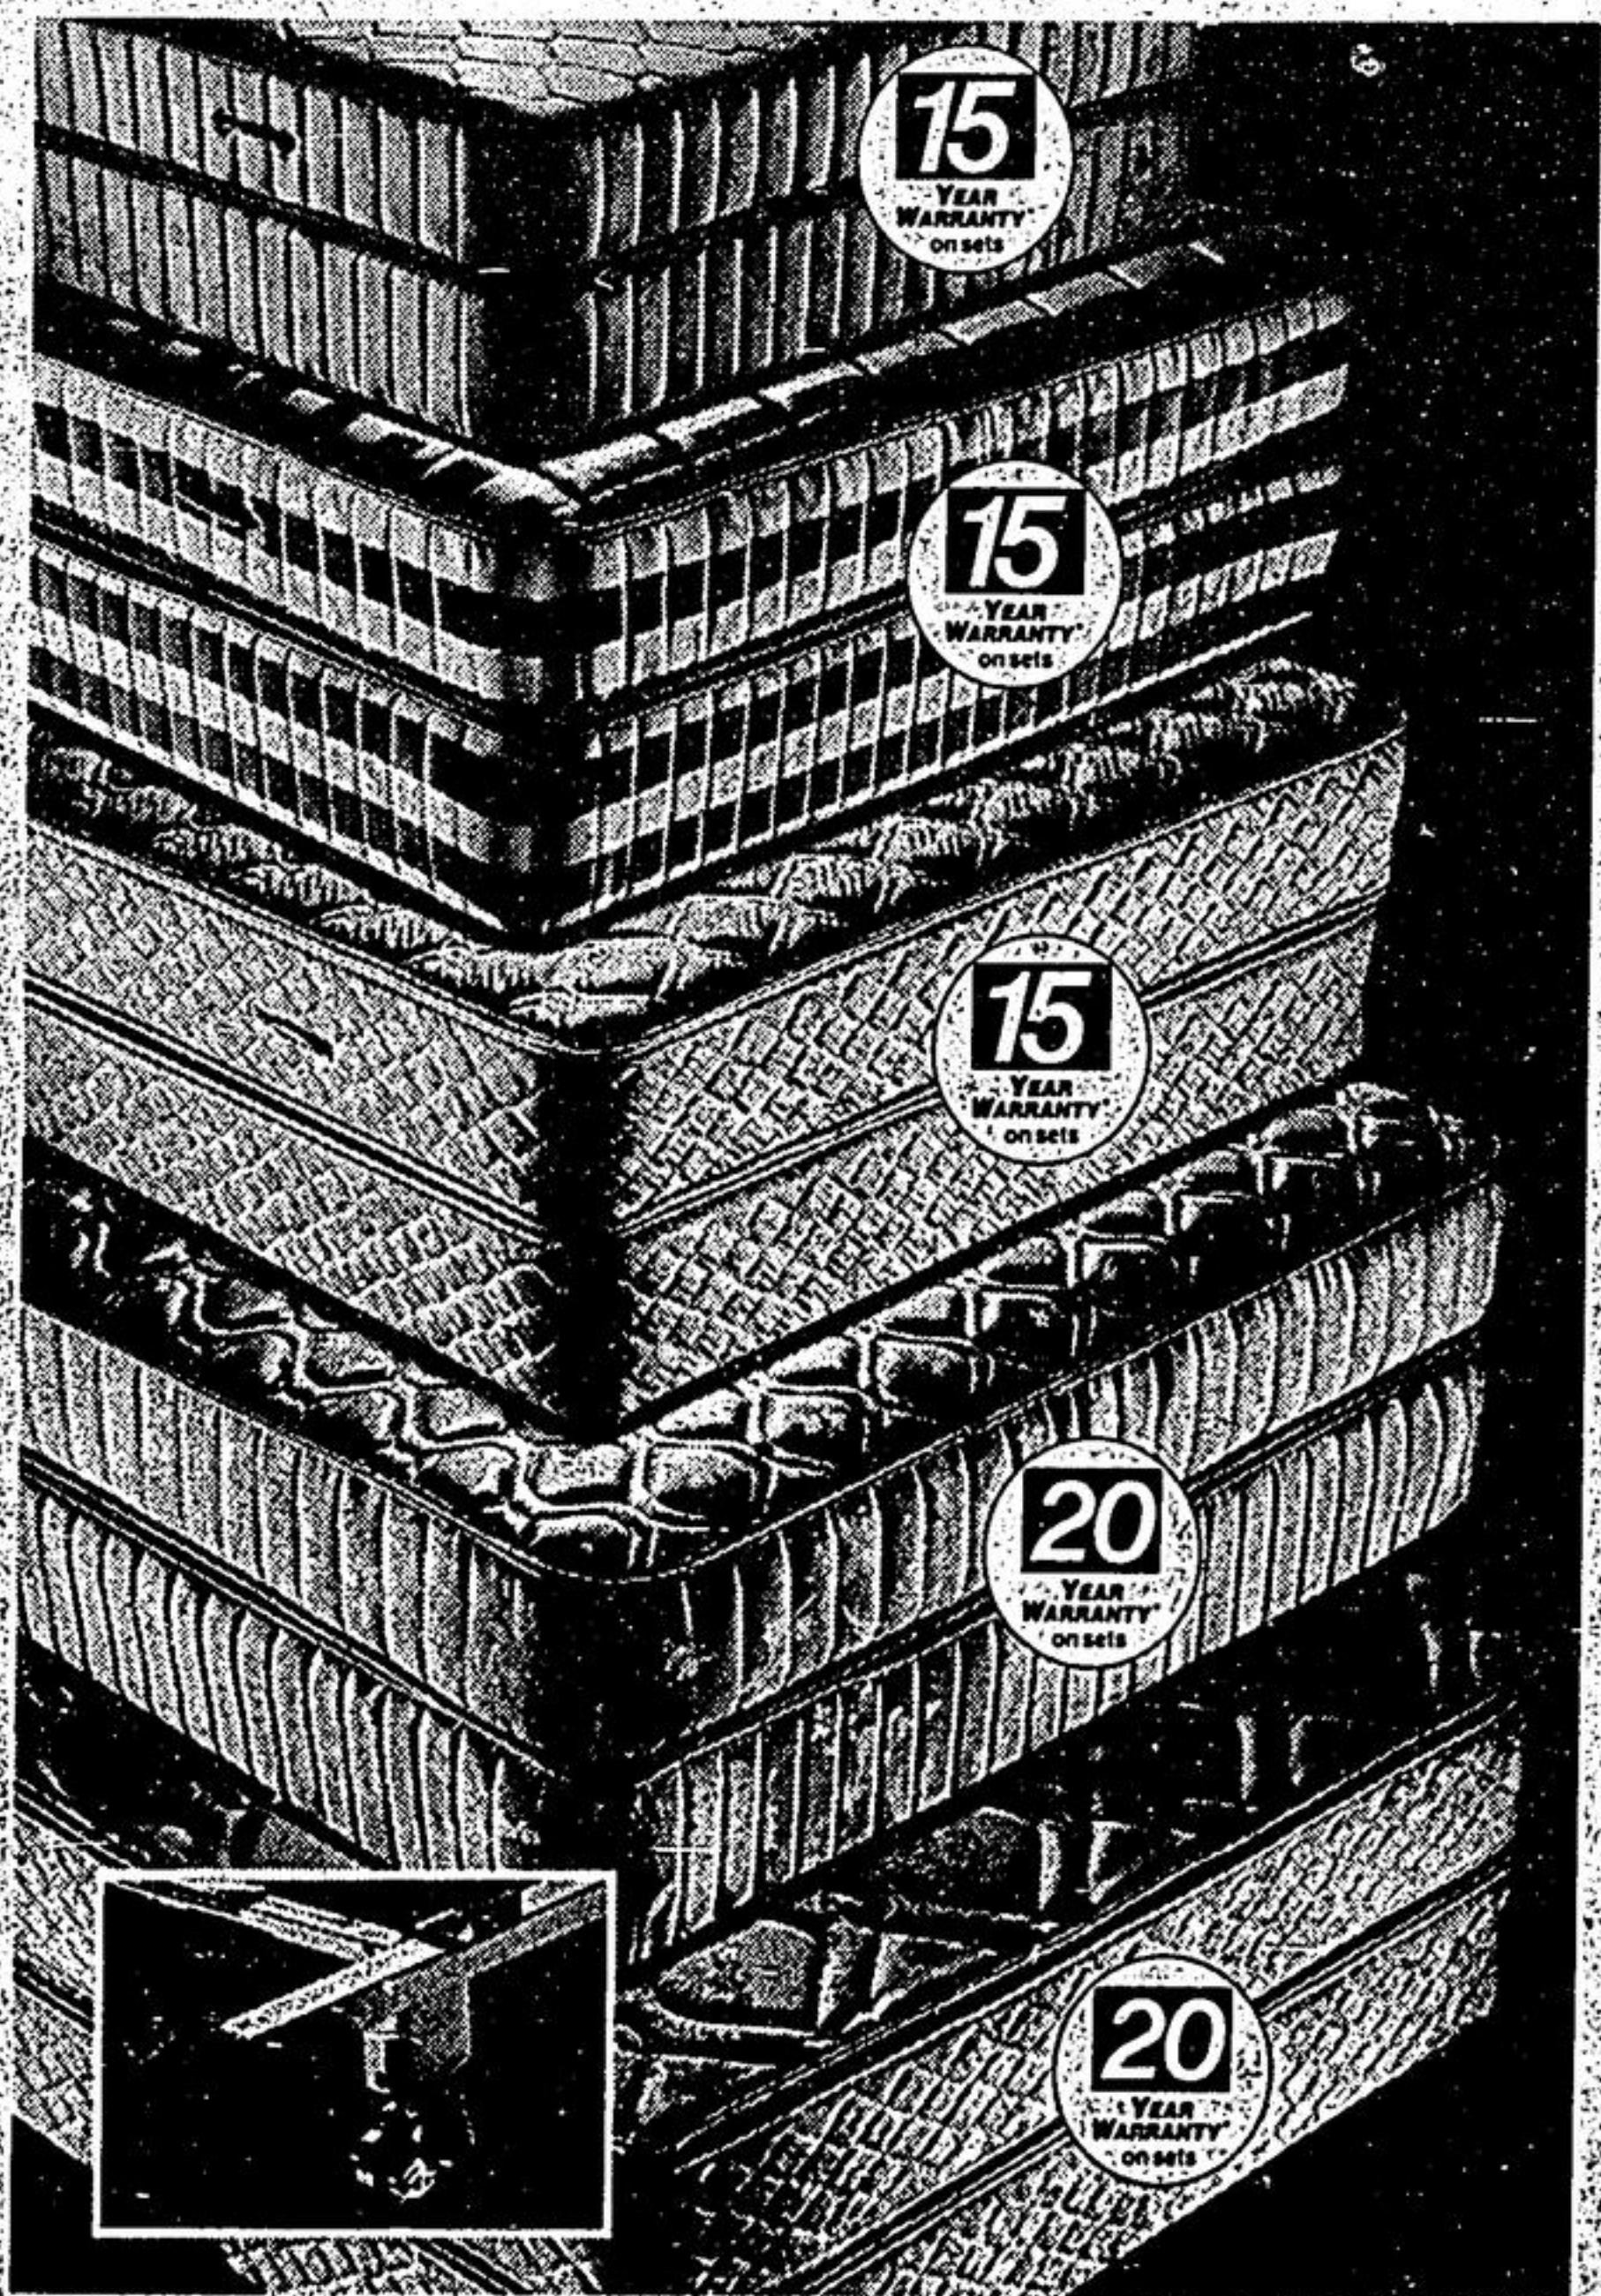

"We look after the area right up to Davis Drive on the north and (Hwy) 404 on the west. We have two graders, two trucks and nine units that we can move snow with."

There are 10 employees handling snow removal and the equipment is put into storage in the middle of April.

They do get some complaints, he concedes, "usually from people who want their street done first. After a snow fall they tell us they haven't seen a snow plow or sander all day."

Primary roads are done first, he states; then secondary roads; residential streets tend to get left until after the main areas have been cleared.
