Food for thought

Make Jones-Webb take advantage of Amnesty Week at the Stouffville Public Library last week to return an overdue book. Anyone with a book was let off without a penalty if they brought in a food donation for the needy. The move allowed both residents and library officials to help Yellow Brick House in Newmarket, a shelter for battered women. Library officials say there are approximately 8,000 overdue books that range from being one day to five years overdue.
