

Little League Theatre slays 'em with jokes

By KATE GILDRDALE
The Little League Theatre's latest venture, "The Little League Cafe," provided audiences at Parkview Village Auditorium with some excellent and humorous entertainment.

The show, written and produced entirely by members of the theatre group, whose exuberance and enjoyment were infectious. The audience sat at round tables to provide the effect of a cafe and refreshments were served by the cast at intermission.

Hosts Jennifer McGowan and Jamie Wagg kept the show rolling along smoothly, except when they were fighting over whose turn it was to announce the next act, and the clowns and skits provided plenty of entertainment in the fast-paced show.

Four extremely fat ladies executed an elephantine can-can and one of them announced: "I've worked my way from a size 44 to a 42 and I still look like a tanker truck, thanks to the Fat Loss Clinic."

Executive producer Mike

Peters had everyone cheerfully groaning in the aisles with jokes like: "I just flew in from Atlantic City and, boy, are my arms tired."

The rumors about Elvis were laid to rest when the king himself (alias Ian Galt) wowed screaming girls with a hip-swivelling "Hound Dog."

Laughs were the order of the day in a skit entitled "The Old and the Restful," which featured a love triangle at a retirement home.

When asked to kiss his girlfriend, the philandering old man replied: "I can't. My dentures are loose."

Mike and Jennifer were the stars of a takeoff of "Dirty Dancing" which ended, after many collisions, with Mike dragging Jennifer unceremoniously from the stage.

Following the intermission, the audience was treated to a work in progress, a play the group is currently rehearsing.

The play was the story of the Little League Cafe, once the haunt of the rich and famous, now threatened with closure.

The cast of characters include

Samantha, the rich lady who is more than a little fond of sherry, and Lynn White, the unscrupulous politician. The play was well written and competently acted; a notable achievement for the young thespians.

The Little League Theatre now boasts a membership of 58 and this summer will be offering theatre camps for children between five and 14 years of age.

Dates are July 3-14, July 17-28, July 31-Aug. 11 and Aug. 14-25. For more information call Steve Payne at 642-0006.
