Stouffville's growth goes back a century

Here again are some items of interest called up from issues of The Tribune of years gone by:

100 years ago

Sept. 20, 1889: A good many of our neighbors, to say nothing of residents, are perhaps unaware of the large number of new residences that have been built during the present year, or are in course of erection. Some of them are exceptionally fine and will rank among the best in town, notably those of Messrs. John Baker and S. M. Warriner, the former at the corner of Main and Albert Streets, and the latter on Church. A long list to the number of 20 or more could be made out if space permitted, all of them good substantial houses and all adding to the appearance as well as the size of our town. Some of these days folks will wake up and find that their village has become a town.

Sept. 21, 1939: Last week the price of cream at Stouffville Creamery stepped up from 25c to 27c per pound butterfat, thus keeping pace with the sharp ad-

Stouffville teen into the books

Michael Reed, 15, of Linden Lane in Stouffville was into the books this summer — but not as a student.

He worked for nine weeks with Whitchurch-Stouffville Public Library. His duties included the inputting of catalogue information into the library's database for audio-visual, periodical and paperback material. This additional information will provide more efficient access to the library's collection for library users.

Michael's nine-week assignment was funded through the Ministry of Culture and Communications Experience '89 program.

vance in the price of butter. The creamery butter at the local plant was selling at 28c per pound with dairy pints slightly less in the stores.

Other good news for the farmer was the jump in the price of potatoes to 90c and $1 per bag in the field and don't forget the standard bag is now 75 pounds instead of 90.

Sept. 24, 1964: Stouffville municipal council meeting evolved into a barrage of verbal charges on Thursday night as Councillor Parsons read a statement which he suggested could be the form of a resolution to unseat Reeve Timbers. The outburst followed opinions at a previous meeting that the Reeve had improperly used his office in the proposed sale of land in which the municipality had an interest.

However, the proposal of Councillor Parsons failed to gain council support in the form in which it was presented. All council members agreed that the figures cited by both Councillor Parsons and Deputy Reeve Laushway were correct on their view, but none was prepared to act as a seconder on Mr. Parsons' proposed resolution.

Sept. 20, 1979: "For my grandparents," was the reason given by 18-year-old Marilyn Iloff for entering the Miss Markham Fair contest Saturday. And her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Meyer, Main Street North, were undoubtedly two of the happiest people attending the event.

Who's got my tail?
Two-year-old Austin MacDonald discovered that not all goats run when approached by little boys. The youngster was checking out the sculpture which stands in front of the Whitchurch-Stouffville Library.

Rabies clinics

The coming of autumn can also be a hazardous time of year for your pet, as the threat of rabies increases at this time of year.

But back by popular demand, the Ballantrae Lions Club is sponsoring two rabies clinics Saturday, Sept. 23.

One will be held at Cedar Beach Pavilion at Musselman's Lake from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Dr. Gary Gall will be giving the vaccination.

Another clinic will take place at Dr. Hacking's new location on Aurora Sdrd. west of Hwy. 48 from 1:30 to 4 p.m. There's a charge of $5 per pet.
