

Skating Club's carnival was ice event of the season

It was the ice event of the season for Stouffville's Recreation Centre, with crowds far in excess of anything the town's participants-only hockey program was able to draw this season.

And the 200 plus members of the Stouffville Figure Skating Club gave them something to cheer about in the past weekend's ice revue, "Ice Show 1990", the 35th edition of the bi-annual production.

The show was a wonderful blend of preschool fun and serious skating, with a touch of razzle-dazzle in the persons of Scott Welch and Jodeyne Higgins, guest skaters who had the kids in the audience whistling while the adults sat in awe.

But the true show stopper was Brenda Hachey, the club's Gold level veteran, who was performing in her final show before heading off to the University of Waterloo next year.

And she went out in a blaze of glory, twirling, jumping and landing with effortless ease and grace in her solo set to the music of Les Miserables.

The kids were adorable in their Sesame Street costumes, working arduously to stay in their positions, and, in some cases, just to maintain an upright position.

The famous Sesame Street characters came alive, with everyone from Cookie Monster through Oscar the Grouch being portrayed with gusto by Michelle Barker, Kirsten Kelly, Julie Hardy, Kirsten Fraser, Stephanie McLeod, Karen Boyd, Jennifer Selwyn, Nicole Jeffrey, Melissa Miller, Jennifer McLeod, Julie Selwyn, and Leanne Hoover.

Costumes were terrific, with the alphabets, musical notes, bakers, gingerbreads cookie-cutes et al filling the ice surface with color and vitality in the Sesame segment.

Leslie Penny and Michael Pride were impressive in their first half Fantasy segment solos.

The second half was packed with originality and flair, starting off with an old-fashioned skating party which was like a scene from a traditional country Christmas card. Andrew Boyd's solo was done with precision.

Then we were taken back to Canada centennial year as the "Children of the World" production started with skaters representing Canada dressed as Canadian Flags, and skating to Bobby Gimby's original "Canada".

After we had been treated to music and costumes of the Ukraine, the Middle East, Scotland, France, and Bavaria, Nicole Liadis skated a spirited solo to a lively Greek number.

The segment wound up with Nicole and little sister Zoe waving their little Canadian flags as the entire international contingent skated around them, their own mini-Canadian flags in the air.

Nicole Vautier and Lee-Anna Hamilton performed solos in a tribute to music of the 1980s. In the final production, "A Celebration of the '90s", the dance craze of the year, the Lambada, was celebrated in music as 20 young ladies in hot pink, sequined mini-outfits were as dazzling as the sparklers they carried.

A big success, with a pat on the back to the club's pro director Hans Ahlgren, carnival co-ordinator Joan Hamilton, costume chief Marsha Vautier, and all the hard working volunteers and willing sponsors who made it come together.

And last, but not least, a hearty hurrah for the pride of Stouffville on this particular occasion, the skaters of the Stouffville Figure Skating Club!
