

Fashionable friends

The Markham-Stouffville Family Life Centre was given a $250 boost last week with a donation from Kappa Upsilon, the local chapter of the Beta Sigma Phi Sorority. The money was raised last month at the Tulips and Tea Fashion Show held at Parkview Village in Stouffville. Here, Kappa Upsilon Treasurer Eleanor Davidson (left) and President Lori Cliff (right) present the donation to Family Life Centre Director Ed Meade.

Kideo here for festival

This year the Strawberry Festival will be adding some exciting attractions to its activities including Kideo, one of today's most popular groups for preteens.

Kideo is a colorful three-piece band whose popularity with children between 5 and 12 is well established.

The three young Canadians who make up the group are famous for their trademark colored wigs and bright clothing, as well as their ability to empathize with the feelings of their pre-teen audience through the familiar medium of good old rock 'n' roll.

The group consists of lead guitarist Ace Manners (he's the blue dude); drummer P.J. Styles in red and bassist Buddy Goodfellow in eye-popping green. Their 45 minute set consists of upbeat original music which includes numbers like "Clap, Snap, Tap, Rap" to encourage audience participation and "Stranger Danger" to help kids deal with the question of trust.

Cathy Phillips, a member of the Strawberry Festival committee, approached Stouffville librarian Sheila McLeod when she was looking for ideas for children's entertainment during the festival. "She was absolutely marvellous," says Cathy. "She had a folder full of children's entertainers and information on how to contact them."

The band will be appearing onstage in the Town park on Saturday, June 30 at 4 p.m.
