Make sure you're not victimized

Our Region is among the safest places in the world to live, work and play.

There are preventative steps you can take to increase your safety in the home, on the streets, or while you are using transportation.

The first step in personal safety is to prevent becoming a victim. This becomes a personal decision as to how much you are willing to alter your lifestyle, mobility and freedom, in order to improve your own security.

In your home there are numerous ways that a higher level of security can be achieved. Have a peephole installed in solid doors that lead onto your home.

Well lit doorways and walkways are a deterrent to suspicious persons. Shy away from having signs on your front law, etc. stating your family name.

For post boxes and in apartments, a woman living alone should use only her first initial, then her last name in order to prevent unwanted visitors and phone calls.

Be cautious when answering your door, and request identification from delivery, repair or service people, including police officers. Keep a list of emergency numbers by your telephone.

Placing your house numbers on the back of your house is beneficial to your neighbors, in the event that they have to contact emergency services on your behalf. Without leaving the safety of their own homes, they can give your house number to persons like the police and ensure them of your exact location.

That brings us to neighbors. Do you know yours? Have you taken the time to greet them? How many children live next door? Do your neighbors have any special medical needs? Is there a senior citizen near you that needs to be called on from time to time?

How about sharing house sitting duties? Can you count on your neighbors to collect any mail or papers from your door while you are on vacation? Can they assist you with lawn cutting and snow removal and generally keep an eye on your residence, calling the authorities in the event of suspicious persons or vehicles on or near your property?

All these things can assist you in having a safer neighborhood. You should check with your local police department about safety measures you can take. Perhaps you could sign up to become involved in the "PC/COPS" program, a computer system that contacts your residence by telephone, in order to alert you to missing persons from your area, and crime related matters in the community.

Neighborhood Watch is an excellent way to get to know and assist your neighbors. Become involved by watching out for each other in the region, and your community becomes a safer place to live.
