Ideally, all newspapers would be made with recycled paper that was made with recycled paper that was made with recycled paper that was made with recycled paper that was made with recycled paper.

One day, the economics of newsprint recycling will work themselves out. Newsprint producers will be able to supply much more recycled newsprint and at the same time provide a market for neighborhood paper drives. It will happen.

Until it does, we're buying as much recycled newsprint as we can. And already, we can see an increased supply on the horizon. Eventually, there will be enough recycled newsprint to go around. And around. And around.
