'Barbara' is a one-of-a-kind Simmental

arrival of Acceleration's offspring last January was looked forward to with considerable enthusiasm.

"The first one hit the ground at 2 a.m. one night," she recalled.

Black and white

"We went out later to see how the other cow was getting on and as I walked into the barn (the calf) went plop on the ground, but it was black and white."

Hazel's initial reaction was one of shock and dismay. "Absolutely the first thing you think is there's got to be a mistake. I thought it was a Holstein."

Advice

When she called a friend for advice, "he was silent for a long time, then he said it was the most valuable thing that had ever been born on my farm; the only black and white full blood in the world." Extensive blood typing and DNA tests proved that the calf, despite her coloring, was indeed a Simmental, and Hazel named her Barbara, after a close friend.

"I got into (Simmental breeding) a long time ago through a cousin of Dave's, who married a cowboy in Montana," she explained.

"Some of the best times in my life have been spent there."

Barbara's husband has since passed away, but when Hazel called her to tell her about their unique calf, "she was so excited that I told her we were naming it Barbara, after her."
