R-2000 homes healthier

Do houses breathe like humans? The answer is yes if the house is built the modern way.

It's difficult to improve indoor air quality in a conventional home very much, because you have less control over air leakage. With an R-2000 home, you have a whole-house ventilation system that ensures indoor air quality.

The mechanical ventilation system in an R-2000 home works like a human lung, inhaling fresh air, and exhaling stale air. It works harder in the kitchen, laundry room, bathroom and work areas, because these areas require higher levels of ventilation.

An R-2000 home is a healthier house. It promises an improved indoor environment with less dust and pollen in the home. Each house is equipped with a mechanical ventilation system that must be designed and installed by a registered installer.

R-2000 houses have a proven track record showing that their mechanical ventilation systems provide good air quality.
