Latcham Gallery, participants benefit

A LITTLE NIGHT MAGIC A wonderful collection of fine art and silent auction items were featured at Saturday evening's fundraiser for The Latcham Gallery. Whitchurch-Stouffville Library was transformed into a fairyland of candlelight as guests enjoyed mouth-watering hors d'oeuvres and desserts while making last-minute bids on the silent auction. Among the works on display, James Bessey's painting 'Farmer's Market' raised $500. The Stouffville artist, who recently exhibited a selection of his paintings at the gallery, made an outright donation of the work for the event.

Beyond Craft, the gallery's boutique of contemporary crafts, takes place Nov. 24 to 27. There will be an early bird opening Wednesday, Nov. 24 from 7 to 9:30 p.m. The Latcham Gallery's presentation of Famous People Players at Markham Theatre Dec. 10 and 11 is a preview of a show that the players will perform on Broadway, organizer Lynda Giles told The Tribune last week. "It's received a standing ovation at every single performance," she said of the new production, which has been hailed as the troupe's best show ever. To book tickets, call the theatre box office at 479-0201.

JIM MOVES UP Former Tribune editor Jim Thomas was recently promoted to the position of supervisor of customer and tenant services at Upper Canada Mall in Newmarket. Jim joined mall staff to work in security four years ago and was later named chief of security at the facility. His new responsibilities include visiting other malls owned by the company and writing up reports comparing their facility with his. "I also do a newsletter called Shop Talk which comes out quarterly and I speak at high school assemblies and service club seminars." He deals with all customer complaints and is in charge of Worker's Compensation for mall staff. Jim, who turns 65 next year, is mulling over his future employment plans. "They have given me the choice with the promotion to work full time or part time and I will tell them the first of the year when I've decided." Whatever happens, he is delighted and amazed at his promotion and thoroughly enjoys all aspects of his job. "It's fabulous," he said.
