

Spring Home and Garden

Schell Lumber: over seven decades of quality service

For 72 years, local residents have been relying on Schell Lumber for all of their building supplies.

Presently owned by brothers Percy and Harry Schell, the operation was originally started by their father Wesley back in 1922. The third generation has followed in the footsteps of their forefathers too; Percy has two sons and two daughters working at the firm, Harry has one son.

"And in another 10 years, their children will be joining in," said Neil Findlay, spokesperson for Schell Lumber.

Schell Lumber is a full service lumber and building supply outlet with the focus on the word "service".

"The company prides itself on customer service," said Findlay. "We will help a customer with a five cent purchase as much as a person who is building their own custom home. We take the time to ensure the customer gets the proper product to suit their needs."

The staff at Schell Lumber are well-qualified, and eager, to answer any questions people have from getting a project started, through to completion.

Schell Lumber is part of the Homecare organization - an affiliation which gives members better buying power, thus keeping the prices at a competitive rate.

"We pride ourselves on the quality of our materials," said Findlay, "while at the same time, we try to offer the best possible pricing."

"We will help a customer with a five cent purchase as much as a person who is building their own custom home."

One special feature at Schell Lumber is drawing customers from far beyond the local area - custom millworking is offered by Harry Schell.

"Anything that can be made out of wood, we can do," said Findlay, including custom doors, windows, and specialty items. One customer came from Kingston to have board-and-batten items made up by Schell.

Schell Lumber is located at 33 Edward Street in Stouffville.
