Happy Daze in Ballantrae

Take a former strip joint-turned-pizza place, add a fun loving couple who are short on restaurant experience but long on innovation and desire, and you've got Whitchurch-Stouffville's latest slap in the face in these our economic times in which we live.

When Beverley and Gary Lyons got the itch to open up a 1950's and 60's theme family restaurant-bar in the abandoned restaurant across the street from their Ballantrae home in early October, their friends thought they were crazy.

But today, after two months of slugging and four weeks of serving up burgers, roast beef, karaoke and golden oldies, those same friends are now in agreement that the Lyons have come up with a hit. The place is called Happy Daze, and the whole idea is to take people back to the idealized version of the 50's and 60's as portrayed in the popular TV show of a few years back.

They've brought in an authentic looking juke box, which has been modified to play compact discs at three selections for a buck. The popcorn machine is also there, and the old 78's are up on the walls.

But the coup de grace is the genuine 1947 Chrysler Royal that sits just outside the door - the same model that served as the family car of the Cunninghams in the Happy Days TV series. The car was purchased to add atmosphere, said Gary. "But when someone tried for an hour and a half to get a taxi on our opening night, we decided to turn it into a courtesy car for people who choose not to drive home," he added.

While Beverley and Gary admit it's a long haul, they are beginning to believe they have come up with a winner. "We did all the work ourselves," Gary said, trying to describe the mess they were confronted with when they took the place over. "The pipes were frozen and they had split. We built the bar, the dance floor, and the stage. We opened the place up and added the wood work. And we bought the tables and chairs at auctions, and we refinished it ourselves."

Gary and Beverley admit they've had their share of problems since opening the doors. But they've never looked back, and they insist they are having as much fun as the crowds who are steadily discovering the spot. "Neither of us had any restaurant experience, but we're learning fast," said Gary, an antique and custom car dealer. Beverley once operated a sewing and house cleaning business. The music is the key, said Gary, adding that he and Beverley have always loved music and dancing. Beverley says her husband is forever trying to get her up on the stage to sing. She admits to a passion for music and singing, but is a little shy when it comes to crooning in her own restaurant.

Gary and Beverley admit to being more than a little surprised at the support they have received so far, especially in light of the tough economic times. "But then I guess everybody's got to get out every now and then or else they'd go stir crazy," Beverley said.
