

Times have changed since the first Mother's Day

Mother's day is like no other mothers...special to all of us who day. It's very special...special to owe so much to our mothers!

How we spend Mother's Day may be of our own choosing, but the ways we have of telling our moms that they're very unique are almost without end.

Going back to the very first Mother's Day, and its founder, Ms. Anna Reeves Jarvis, there was far less to do than there is today. After all, in 1908, movies were still experimental and there was no TV or radio.

Now that it's 1993 the world is far, far different than just three generations ago. But, the more things change, the more they remain the same! Ms. Jarvis urged that the first Mother's Day be observed with a special visit to mother or a special letter or even a bunch of wild flowers.

Once, a person could walk down the street or cross through the backyard and be at mother's house! Today, a special visit might entail a thousand-mile trip by plane or train and could take hours.

And instead of a special visit, a telephone call will serve to bring loved ones voice-to-voice - if not face-to-face.

If you live close to your mother, you can get her out of the house and cook a gourmet meal for her at home or take her out to a Mother's Day dinner at the finest restaurant your bank account will allow. It'll be a treat for the whole family. But, make reservations early. Only Thanksgiving is a bigger "eat out" day.

Mothers are drivers too!

When most people think of Mother's Day gifts, they traditionally think of flowers, jewelry, dinners out... All those gifts are much-loved and appreciated, but there may be some non-traditional gifts that would be equally as appreciated - and a bit more of a surprise!

For example, why not present Mom with a gift certificate to have her car cleaned, inside and out. Or a package of coupons for car washes might be appreciated.

A licence plate cover that declares Mom "#1" would convey the perfect message, or perhaps a "Mom's Taxi" sign for the car window would bring a knowing smile to her face.

Many service stations now have handy organizers for the trunk, to hold in place items like windshield washer fluid.
