Officer shaves moustache, disciplinary action dropped

By ROGER BELGRAVE
Staff Reporter

A suspended York Region police officer is back on duty after trimming his moustache.

A day before his scheduled disciplinary hearing, internal charges against Const. Chris Egsgard were dismissed.

The 16-year police veteran was suspended in early January for refusing an order to trim his moustache.

Under York Regional Police rules and regulations officers' moustaches must be "neat and well trimmed."

Chief Bryan Cousineau decided to suspend Egsgard, with pay, after he refused to obey the order.

EGSGARD

Bailey said Egsgard and the union decided it was better to try and find an internal resolution to the problem than get tied up in a legal battle.

"The chief agreed to sit down with the association and draft up a reasonable facial hair policy," Bailey said. The two sides are expected to start discussions on a policy within the next few months.

Bailey said Egsgard was satisfied with the result and returned to work at Newmarket court offices Jan. 26.

Yes, Trimark makes headlines. They've proven to be a powerhouse of mutual fund and investment opportunities in recent years.

But what about this coming year? What's changed? And where are the new opportunities?

Let a consultant at Private Investors Management take you behind the headlines at Trimark.

How Trimark funds performed last year is a matter of public record.

How they'll perform next year is a matter of Private opinion.

At Private Investors we listen. And build our relationships based on a personal evaluation of your individual needs and goals.

Then we develop customized strategies for you, using a full range of financial tools, including GICs, mutual funds and self-directed RRSPs.

NO NEW TAXES

Dear Mr. Martin,

Like other Canadians, I am sick to death of the irresponsible spending habits you and your predecessors have exhibited.

There are only so many dollars to go around and we all must live within our means.

I am fed-up with your money hungry ways and demand that you cut spending, not raise taxes, because quite frankly we've had enough.

Its time to bite the bullet, Mr. Martin while there's still a chance. Its time to cut spending rather than grab more of our hard earned money to prop up a spend thrift government.
