Humber College launches first professional golf management program in Ontario

Beginning this fall Humber College will be offering a full-time professional golf management program at both the post secondary (three years) and post graduate (one year) levels.
The program will be available at the North Campus and will combine courses in business administration and golf management with practical work experience.
"Our objectives are simple," says program coordinator, Grant Fraser. "We intend to provide excellence in business and golf management education ensuring our students are well positioned for employment upon graduation."
Anyone interested in applying should know that requirement in becoming a professional golfer have recently changed, he continues. At the beginning of the year the Canadian Professional Golfers' Association (CPGA) introduced its new Enhanced Learning and Innovative Training and Education (ELITE) program for all incoming apprentices. They must now obtain post secondary education as part of the criteria required in becoming a Class A golf professional.
Admittance into the Humber College program will be competitive, Fraser adds. In addition to being an accomplished golfer, students admitted into the three-year diploma program will have successfully completed Grade 12 mathematics and English. Students in the one-year, post graduate, fast track program will require a university degree, college diploma, or related industry experience of at least five years.

"Given the response to date, we expect to receive five or six times the number of applications for every seat we have available in the first year of the program," Fraser says.
Humber College, North Campus, is located at 205 Humber College Blvd., Etobicoke. For more information contact Fraser at 416-675-6622, ext. 4346.
