

Let's Get Growing

Gardens of Britain beautiful this time of year

I expected that my trip to visit the gardens of Britain would provide, among other pleasures, a welcome respite from summer's heat. Alas, southern England is experiencing intense heat and drought and some of the gardens we visited were showing signs of stress. Nevertheless, their colors shone through from Sissinghurst's famous White Garden to its Purple Border, which is more to my liking, to the spectacular Red Border at Hidcote. (Please see page 8)
