Brittons not the only ones to have parties, reader says

Dear Editor,

In reference to a letter to the editor in the Sept. 16 issue of The Tribune from a Mrs. E.K. Dissette, I was disturbed by this person's statements. How does she know that noise from a so-called late night party was coming from the Brittons?

She lives at 1 1/4 miles from the Britton home and there are 41 estate homes including a children's summer camp between the two homes.

Does Mrs. Dissette have Superman hearing? I have what I consider good hearing but cannot understand how noise made from this distance could possibly disturb me unless I was looking to be disturbed.

As far as calling the police goes when she made the noise complaint to them what did they do, check every one of the 41 homes out to see where the noise was coming from?

Certainly the Brittons are not the only people in this area to host any type of summer party. The only time the police showed up, there was no noise to be found and they left without taking any type of action. I understand that the noise and cars may bother the close neighbors but to disturb someone at this distance is beyond belief.

If noise at this range bothers her, I would bet that she calls the airport and complains about the noise from the planes flying overhead.

I believe that this person resents the Brittons because of the statement she made (Do we have to be advised of the fact that the Brittons do charity work everytime their name is in the newspaper?). What does she want, more presstime? The Brittons do not ask for the mention of their names in the papers or want it.

As far as the sympathy going in the Brittons' favor, maybe this is because some people see the goodness in them and feel it is worth writing about.

New Guiding groups open due to response

Dear Editor,

Welcome and welcome back! On behalf of Stouffville Sparks, Brownies, Girl Guides, Pathfinders and Rangers, I wish to welcome back our returning Guiders this year.

We are also overwhelmed at the tremendous community response to our need for new leaders.

As a result of this new leadership we are able to open new units and properly serve and enjoy our existing groups.

Thank you all very much.
