Mother's day Make it special for Mom

Commemorating mom became official North American holiday in 1914

(from page 14)

In 1907, on the second anniversary of her mother's death, West Virginian Anna Jarvis, launched a campaign to establish a nation-wide day commemorating mothers. The holiday became official in 1914.

Anna Jarvis also introduced the carnation as the official flower of Mother's Day due to her mother's fondness for them. It was believed that carnations, like mothers, symbolize sweetness, purity and endurance. Today, red carnations are worn in honor of (or given to) mothers, while white ones are worn for a mother who is deceased.
