New CD-ROM system up and running

We are excited!
We are wired!
We are hooked up to an 8-slot CD ROM tower that gives us access to three super reference sources.
The new CD setup allows patrons to pull up information from a Magazine Article Summary which covers about 400 titles published from 1984 to last month. Many of the articles can be viewed in full text and the most recent update contains more Canadian content to meet our reference needs.

Magazines and newspapers have always been our library's main sources of topical information but, without an index articles have been difficult to locate in newspapers.
Now, thankfully, we have the Globe and Mail on CD.

This not only provides an index and related articles from the Globe, it also gives the same coverage for the Winnipeg Free Press and four other Canadian newspapers.
The third option on our CD ROM setup is an answer to a librarian's prayer.
It provides the complete answer to the oft asked question, "Can you suggest something to read?"

It's a handy-dandy program called What do I Read Next? Through it, you can choose to search for book suggestions by author, title or subject and by age categories: preschool through 10, 11 through 17 and adult.

There's a Search by List which provides access to titles included on lists of award winners and general recommendations from magazines and newspapers.
The Extended Search enables you to search for titles that match a combination of characteristics including genre, setting, time period and characters.
Eureka!
Next time we are asked for authors who write like Danielle Steel or Sue Grafton, we'll be able to produce a long list and keep our fingers crossed that we have the books to back up the suggestions!
