Schoolreach trivia team has many participants

By JOHN LAMBERSKY
SDSS Correspondent

Schoolreach is the newest team at Stouffville District Secondary School.

Formerly called Reach For The Top, Schoolreach is a competitive, team-oriented trivia game. In the past, competitions have been televised on local stations, and are still broadcast when teams make it to the national level.

Some famous Canadians, such as Bob Rae, were involved in Schoolreach when growing up.

Although both the SDSS junior and senior teams only field a team of four (plus possible alternates) in competition, the teams are large, comprised of dozens of participants.

This makes for a unique, low-pressure atmosphere, while still remaining competitive.

Mr. Grant Edwards, the team coach, is new to SDSS this year. Transferring from Sutton District Secondary School to SDSS, he has taken the position of history department head.

Edwards has been involved with Schoolreach for some time, having assisted the Sutton Schoolreach squad last year to a York Region championship.

"It (Schoolreach) provides a venue for students who aren't sports oriented, to have fun and compete," said Edwards.

"Not everyone is interested in sports," he added.

Not only that, said Edwards, but it shows kids who aren't strong in athletics that there are other things out there.

Kids who love reading and knowledge can participate in something that interests them.

Indeed, Schoolreach is the only non-athletic team at Stouffville District Secondary School. The players, though, are often the students who are involved in other ways.

Most Schoolreach competitors are active on sports teams, the school band, or student council.

The team has senior practices every Monday and Thursday, and the junior team meets most nights after school.

The first match for SDSS will be next week in Stouffville against the Sutton team, last year's York champions.

"We should do well," said Mr. Edwards.

He added, "We'll be in competition for the York Region championship."
